

There once was Aboriginal people that lived on Wakka Wakka land they all cared for each other and gathered water for all their people and collected some food as well. One day there was a new born baby that belonged to the King and Queen, his name was James. They were so happy and the father said, "One day you're going to be King of this Wakka Wakka land and take over for me." When the son turned 6 he went to go play near Barambah to go have a little swim in, when he was swimming he heard something in the bushes. He ran home and said, "Dad I heard some thing in the bushes." The father was so happy that he came back because the father said, "Son go where your mother now." The son got so scared even his mother was holding him tight everything was quiet and then the son heard gun shots and he didn't even know what they was but father always use to talk about them every night by telling every night. "What's happening?" the little boy said then he started to cry but then everything was quiet then heard more gun shots. When James went outside he got shocked that father got shot on the side of his arms and lots of blood was coming out of his arm. The person who shot him was the Captain of the ship his name was Charlie and he wasn't friendly at all but then behind the Captain was a little boy named JJ he was 6 years old and very shy and never talked to anybody after his mother passed away. All the adults were slaves and the kids had to go find some food for the men that took over the land and then James went to go and get some water. James' father had a meeting with the Captain they were agents each other they both had different lands and the two boys James and JJ was best friends always sneak away from their fathers and always go for a swim. One day the fathers found out about their sons and was very at angry both of them there was going to be a war but then the sons said, "Why are we fighting in the first place," and James said, "We are all the same," but then they looked after each other and made peace and James and JJ were the King and Captain of their people and families. Then JJ had to go and find new people and land to take care of make peace to the world the JJ said, "I will be back."
